

Irini was born in Crete, moved to London in 1980 and worked in the City till 2010. Alongside her career in banking (always with Greek banks so as to maintain links with her homeland), she served as a committee member of the Hellenic Bankers Association for many years, was a legal director, production manager and leading actress of the London Greek Theatre Group and studied History of Art, Architecture And Design at Kingston University.

In Cartmel, driven by her desire to give something back to the community Irini is active as a member of the Cartmel In Bloom Group and the Cartmel Village Society, and enjoys being closely involved with the Living History Project.

On the right, Irini just having returned from her litter pick on Aynsome Road (her 'patch').
